A team of eight D-M members saves the government substantial amounts of time and money daily with their vast technical skills.

At D-M, the Air Force Repair Enhancement Program, known as Gold Flag, has been repairing mission-capable assets for 10 years. Keeping D-M aircraft flying is Gold Flag's primary mission, but they also repair many types of government equipment, including keyboards, printers, fax machines, modems and numerous other assets.

Many of the items being repaired would normally be thrown away.

"Gold Flag was developed during a time when defense spending was more limited," said Master Sgt. Reinhard Schick, Gold Flag manager. "Aircraft parts and other non-fly items coded as throw-away were found to be repairable by Gold Flag personnel."

When an item is brought to Gold Flag, a supply liaison determines the cost differential between repair and replacement.

"We screen items to see if they can be repaired for less than 50 percent of what it would cost for the Air Force to purchase a new one," Schick said. "Technicians will also decide if a fabrication or even a modification can be made to the part before it is determined to be non-repairable."

Spy-vs-Spy: Office of Special Investigation warns, 'remember Operations Security'

By 2nd Lt. Sharon F. Ehasz

Hiding in a dark corner and made indistinguishable by a trench coat, this spy is easily pictured, but sadly is a minority in the spy world.

"Spies are normally not in trench coats or James Bond-like. They are typically average people and even co-workers," said Special Agent Roberts of D-M's Office of Special Investigation, Detachment 217.

Believe it or not, the act of spying for other countries to obtain intelligence information is a problem and it sacrifices the security that the military works so hard to protect.

"Elicitation is one of the biggest ways that military members release important information without even realizing it," said Special Agent Shoemaker, D-M's OSI Det. 217. "An agent of a Foreign Intelligence Service may start a conversation, hiding the purpose, but all the while gaining information without much risk." FIS agents are known to go to bars, restaurants and local hangouts because they know that people tend to get careless and casual when off duty and with friends.

"Even these low-level collections can have a big impact. If FIS agents can get little pieces, they eventually piece them together to show the whole picture," said Shoemaker.

The biggest threat of espionage comes from people in financial trouble, people who have done things in their past for which they can be blackmailed or people that are dissatisfied in another way.

As well as guarding personal conversations, people need to be aware of others. "Be aware of the people that get to work earlier and stay later for no apparent reason. Or those that ask questions about programs or information they don't have a need to know," said Roberts. "Other signs include people spending more time than necessary with classified information or taking information home that they shouldn't. We need to remember that our duty to the United States supersedes any friendships that we may have," added Roberts.

To avoid unknowingly giving information, "follow the need to know guidelines to help combat this problem," suggests Roberts.

With the advancement of technology, a weakness was formed. "People leave computers in foreign hotel rooms while traveling, thinking that the information on them is safe from search. It isn't," said Shoemaker. "There are friendly foreign govern-

Sharp security

Kudos: Since security has become stronger on base, the young men and women at the gate are awesome.

No matter the weather, even if they are tired, they are friendly and polite. Just fantastic. They don't get enough attention. Thank you.

Response: Thank you for taking the time to recognize the outstanding 355th Wing Desert Lightning defenders of our 355th Security Forces Squadron and their augmentees.

You're assessment is right on target, they continue to make the best of a very challenging situation.

As you may know, last spring they were named "Best in Air Force 2000," and they continue to maintain that level of excellence. Too often their contributions are taken for granted, and I appreciate you taking the time to recognize them.

To clean or not to clean

Concern: Why do the contractor cleaners have to clean when people are in the gym working out?

I was in the fitness room sitting on a machine when a contract cleaner came in. He walked from the door of the fitness room to the opposite wall, turned around and walked out again.

Not once did he take that cleaning tool in his hand and make motions like vacuuming. He should have vacuumed all along the wall, between the machines, and behind the machines.

Some Fitness Center person should be supervising these cleaners, at least spot checking, to see if they are doing their jobs.

Response: Thank you for your concern about contract cleaners at the Fitness Center.

Since the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, contract cleaners are not allowed to clean facilities during late evening hours for security reasons. Therefore, our maintenance is scheduled at a specific time during the day.

Fitness Center staff members will be observing the workers in a more diligent manner to ensure that incidents of this nature do not happen again.

If you have any further questions or concerns, please call Robert Gibson, Fitness Center director, at 228-4556.

Senior Airman Jessica Despot, 355th Medical Group Allergy and Immunizations technician, prepares serum for use. The 355th Medical Group is commanded by Col. (Dr.) Thomas Scott and is made-up of the Medical Operations, Aerospace Medicine, Dental and Medical Support squadrons.

The group has more than 350 military and civilian members with about 20 doctors, 10 dentists, 25 nurses and eight Physician Assistants that serve an average of nearly 13,000 patient visits per month. Their patients include active-duty, Guard, Reserve, retirees and family members.

Charged with maintaining a fit force, 355th Medical Group people enhance wellness, performance and readiness.

As one of the most visible units at D-M, the group continually strives to meet the health care needs and expectations of the D-M population by planning, organizing, operating, evaluating and improving a comprehensive system of health services.

The group is responsible for their own logistics, systems management, administration and education and training.

355CRS brings home E.D. Jewett award

By Maj. Kim Wheeler
355th Wing Public Affairs

The 355th Component Repair Squadron received the E.D. Jewett Outstanding Unit honor from the Tucson Metropolitan Chamber of Commerce's Military Affairs Committee March 5 at the Officers' Club.

"This award recognizes the most professional squadron on base, so we take the selection very seriously," said retired Chief Master Sergeant D.J. Nolan, Military Affairs Committee vice chairman. "The 355th CRS exemplifies teamwork, they benchmarked several maintenance initiatives which were adopted Air Force-wide, ensuring the best use of government resources."

Established in 1989, the award is named for retired Colonel E.D. Jewett, a former Military Affairs Committee and Tucson Metropolitan Chamber of Commerce Board Chairman. The annual traveling trophy recognizes the squadron best representing military excellence and community involvement.

"I knew the competition was going to be very tough because of the outstanding accomplishments of all the squadrons across the wing and 12th Air Force, but the men and women of CRS had a phenomenal year, so I was hopeful," said Lt. Col. Thomas Fitch, 355th CRS commander. "I think it's safe to say our men and women were surprised to learn they won this prestigious award, because they aren't focused on what they might get in return for their day-to-day efforts. They work very hard every day to do their best, and good things happen as a result."

To its credit, the 355th CRS Propulsion Flight has had the title as "Air Combat Command's fastest TF34 engine builders" for a two-year stretch; squadron members devoted 9,000 community volunteers' hours toward community efforts such as Special Olympics, Habitat for Humanity, Can-do-Crew and the American Red Cross. Through fund-raising events, the 355th CRS gathered $4,000 for holiday meal baskets for D-M families in need.

"I know our folks went way beyond just 'good enough' and truly took on the challenge to excel this past year," said Fitch. "The innovative A-10 and EC-130 maintenance solutions they developed not only helped the wing fly the largest flying hour program in ACC, but also saved millions of dollars and thousands of man-hours Air Force-wide."

"This award bridges the gap and increases understanding between the military and local community," explained Nolan. "We've always had a strong partnership and we recognize the base contributions to the community. We show our appreciation through this trophy in addition to recognizing the base's Airman Leadership School award recipients and both military and civilian quarterly and annual award winners."

"In nearly 17 years of service, I've never seen a local community that does a better job of supporting its military neighbors," Fitch added.

dollars. Instead, they operate on a small portion of the savings generated from returning repaired items to supply. The rest of the money that is saved by Gold Flag is returned to the wing for quality of life improvements across D-M.

"Before Gold Flag existed, damaged items needed to be repaired by outside sources," said Staff Sgt. Melvin Clem, Gold Flag Technician. "Gold Flag is now preventing millions of those dollars from leaving the base."

Technicians in the Gold Flag program pride themselves on the fact that they have a swift product turn-over rate. Staying in business means finding solutions for anything that is brought through the door.

"The main thing that we want to emphasize is that when in doubt if an item can be fixed, bring it in," said Staff Sgt. John Hart, Gold Flag Technician. "We have an extremely high repair rate and want to continue to expand our capabilities." Gold Flag has screened 260 items so far this fiscal year with 194 successful repairs.

Of the 22 AFREPs in the Air Force, D-M's Gold Flag was number one during the last fiscal year, saving the government $4.3 million. They have already saved more than $1.8 million so far this fiscal year, money that would have been spent on replacement parts and items.

"Gold Flag enhances the base through the repair services that we provide as well as the other programs we help fund," said Schick. "Our technicians have the ability to adapt to new challenges and are always looking for new projects."

Before deciding to scrap that government equipment that isn't working, or for more information on Gold Flag, call 228-2411.

ments, but there is no such thing as a friendly intelligence service."

This weakness is the reason behind guidelines such as leaving pagers and cellular phones outside meetings. Technology has created ways for these items to obtain information from computers without the computer operator knowing. In addition, standard phones aren't secure. So, use Secure Telephone Units whenever discussing sensitive information.

"Operation Security is so critical. Military members need to understand their role as do spouses and dependents," said Roberts. "Leaked information puts us back years in work. It can compromise military strategy and even lives."

To help aide the fight, the 355th Security Forces Squadron has "a team of experts which form a Threat Working Group and a Crisis Cell. This group routinely meets to discuss current intel and counter intel and recommends security measures to better protect the installation," said Staff Sgt. Fred Spano, Installation Anti-Terrorism and Force Protection officer. "We routinely change our security posture by conducting Random Anti-Terrorism Measures. RAMs help make our installation a safer environment for our people and a harder target for terrorist groups." But these groups cannot win the fight alone.

355th Medical Group improves access to care

By Tech. Sgt. B. Coors-Davidson
355th Wing Public Affairs

Access to high-quality medical care for active-duty and retired military members and their families is a key issue for Air Force readiness and quality-of-life.

At D-M, the 355th Medical Group recently made major changes to the appointment telephone system to improve that access.

As part of those changes, patients assigned to a family practice panel will schedule their appointments directly with their own panel.

In order to benefit from these changes, beneficiaries must listen carefully to the prompts when calling for an appointment in order to be connected with the proper clinic or service needed. Callers must let the message start after each prompt before pressing the next number, and can press "9" at anytime within the menu to repeat the options.

"As with any change, there is a learning curve," said Maj. John Johnson, 355th Medical Group Operations officer. "Some problems have been reported with the system from folks who may have memorized which buttons to press to get them to the service they wanted with the old system."

Summary of changes

All three appointment desk phone numbers may be used interchangeably. There is no longer one number for active-duty members and different numbers for family members and people enrolled in TRICARE Prime and Plus.

"The appointment numbers can be used to book appointments in every clinic within the Medical Group," Johnson said. "Family Practice, Optometry and Women's Health appointments are made by the appointment clerks from the panel the patient is assigned to."

Calls to book an appointment with one panel will no longer be directed randomly to another panel. The call will remain in the panel queue until answered by that panel.

Based upon their beneficiary group, callers are given various priorities for making appointments.

Active-duty members can make appointments Monday through Friday from 7 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and weekends from 7:30 to 11 a.m.

People enrolled in TRICARE Prime and Plus and active-duty family members can make appointments Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Saturday and Sunday from 7:30 to 11 a.m. All other beneficiaries, and those 65 or older who are not enrolled in TRICARE Plus, can make space-available appointments Monday through Friday from 2 to 4:30 p.m.

System overview

When patients first call the system, it provides basic information and then prompts the caller to press "1" if it's Monday through Friday or "2" if it is Saturday or Sunday.

Pressing "1" provides additional general information about Medical Treatment Facility hours of operation and asks the caller to provide their beneficiary category.

Active-duty people should press "1," while their family members and TRICARE Prime and Plus members should press "2." All others should press "3." After duty hours, the system provides the answering service number.

The appointment desk numbers are 228-APPT (2778), 228-2699 and 228-2669.

After duty hours, call the 355th MDG answering service at 513-0355.

355th Security Forces asks D-M drivers to slow down

2nd Lt. Sharon F. Ehasz

Carmen Haber, Palo Verde Village resident, takes daughter Kali, 5, and son Joey, 3, out for a bicycle ride. As the weather improves and the school year draws closer to an end, drivers must adhere to posted speed limits and remain alert for children.

By 2nd Lt. Sharon F. Ehasz
355th Wing Public Affairs

D-M drivers are driving faster – and getting caught. The fact that people are getting caught is a positive thing from a Security Forces standpoint. But it's no wonder that people are driving faster. The base speed limits are too slow. Right?

Wrong! Between Nov. 1 and Feb. 28, Security Forces issued 190 speeding citations. That's up 49 percent from the previous year when only 128 citations were issued.

"With the exception of the Firing Range, there is nowhere on base you can't get to in less than five minutes while traveling 30 miles per hour. In contrast, if you get caught speeding, it takes the average patrolman about 15 minutes to write a citation and send you on your way, so speeding will lose you time," said Tech Sgt. Tyrone Patterson, Security Forces Squadron.

"The base also assesses points to your on-base driving record and your base driving privileges can be suspended after accumulating 12 points in a calendar year or 18 points in a two year span," Patterson said. "Finally, a speeder can receive a seven day driving suspension letter if caught speeding 11 mph over the limit."

With points being accumulated and the option to drive on-base at stake, it seems that fewer people would speed. However, these consequences only deter some people.

"The places most ticketed are Quijota St. between the Shopette and the Youth Center and Albrow Blvd." said Patterson. These two areas are also near Smith Elementary School and family housing. Neither street is a main thoroughfare to major buildings on base. Rather, they are areas saturated with youth.

In a society filled with people who judge parents for every action of their child, some actions cannot be controlled. "I have a stroller connected to my bike which makes it hard to jump off to grab our five year old, Kali. A few weeks ago Kali started riding outwards towards the street and I yelled. She couldn't hear me at all and kept going closer and closer to the street," said Carmen Haber, Palo Verde Village resident and mother of three children. "If people were more informed that we have hard of hearing and deaf children on base, that play like other children, maybe they would be more careful."

So put up signs. People would at least slow down in those areas. Right?

Once again, wrong! "My eldest son is hard of hearing. We have had signs put in near our house to inform drivers, but people still speed," said Julie Carlin, Kachina Village resident and mother of two.

"D-M members are asked to slow down. If not because of the consequences of a ticket, then to help prevent tragedy," Patterson added.

Airman speaks of 'the wall' between airmen, supervisor

By Senior Airman
Nicholas Clisby
355th Medical Group

No, this is not a story of Pink Floyd or how losing your father will drive you mentally insane. It's an explanation of a different kind of wall, the wall between a person in a supervisory position and a subordinate.

Not too many lower ranking members understand or even know of this invisible barrier that exists between them and their superiors. As they ascend through the ranks they should be gradually developing one of their own, it's a part of the follower becoming the leader, it's a part of the stability of our future military forces.

To understand this small part of becoming a person in the position to lead others, you must comprehend that there should always be an understanding between you and your subordinates, it should be that basically you are in charge and what you say goes. It kind of goes along with the adage, "I'm the boss, that's why." Or if you prefer my version, "Rank is rank, be it one or eight more stripes, bars, leafs, or birds."

Now, where the invisible wall comes into this is that there is nothing wrong with being friends or occasionally going out as a department and such, as long as the hierarchy that was established within the force is never broken down between you and your troops. Because, I've seen it first hand and I can guarantee that once it has started to break down it is very hard to repair the "wall" of respect that is supposed to exist in all military settings, on or off duty.

One problem that I've noticed quite a few times in my couple of years of being in the military is that all too often the lower ranks of the infrastructure of the force will actually forget that they are the subordinates and they are the backbone for the completion of the mission.

I'll admit I've been guilty of this a few times, but luckily enough I had a supervisor who wasn't afraid to hurt my feelings by reminding me that if I'm tasked with a job, that job needs to be completed and I need to be followed up on it.

The job should not be done to the bare minimum and I should not expect someone else to tell me when something further needs to be completed on it. And that's one thing that should be in all of us by the time we reach our first duty station. Show some initiative, do the job, and do it to the best of your abilities.

Yes, I consider my superiors my friends, but at the same time I consider them my mentors, or my "mold," if you will.

They are molding me into the leadership of the future force. That's why we have to ascend through the ranks as we do.

The leaders of today's force want only the best, and not just the mediocre.

Now, it's time to throw a few challenges into the wind and see who actually catches them. To all my fellow airmen, I issue the challenge of no matter how close you and your superiors are, I want you to always show them the respect that they deserve and that they have earned.

Show the integrity that we all had instilled inside of us when we walked through those gates at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas. In other words, show the respect on and off duty and never forget that they are still your superiors. Now for the NCOs, senior NCOs and officers of D-M, I issue this challenge; never let your airmen forget who you are and what your position is. Never let them forget where they are, why they are there or that the wall is there and should never be torn down. Because, once it's gone, it's gone.

Now on a personal note, I would like to thank my supervisor for helping me see this point and never letting me forget that she has earned her position in this force and that, the wall will always be there. And to my commander, thank you for showing your whole squadron that you are boss and you want all challenges met - not only met, but met with the best of our abilities.

Final Answer

How have you benefited from the Air Force Assistance Fund?

2nd Lt. Michael Shellhamer
355th Component Repair Squadron

"My grandfather passed away when I was an Airman 1st Class and I did not have the money I needed to get home to Ohio. Not only did AFAF buy the plane ticket but they gave me a little extra cash so that I did not have to travel broke. They will take a bad situation for servicemen and help make it a little better."

Airman Byron Brown
355th Component Repair Squadron

"When my truck's engine blew-up in December, I did not have the money needed to get it repaired. After going over the estimates with the people at AFAF, I was able to get the money the same day so that the repairs could be started immediately. They put me on an easy payment plan that fit my budget."

Airman 1st Class John Rodriguez
355th Component Repair Squadron

"Because of some confusion with the electric company, my wife and I came home one night to no power. We were told that it would be a week before anyone could turn it back on but AFAF was able to get it done the next day. The staff answered all our questions and made us feel that they were on our side the whole time."

Airman 1st Class Javon Lee
355th Component Repair Squadron

"My cousin passed away in August and I needed to get to Florida. I had heard rumors that AFAF made people go through a lot of hassle before they could get money. However, I found out that the rumors were not true at all. The staff was very helpful and friendly. I was able to leave that same day for Florida."

Staff Sgt. J. Dave Andren
355th Equipment Maintenance Squadron

"When I first came to D-M, I had taken a payout from Germany and had trouble adjusting my bills. AFAF gave me a loan to pay for one month of my rent. That money helped put me back on top of my bills and allowed me to focus on work. The staff made me feel like there was someone out there dedicated to helping."

Safety must be part of 'at war' mentality

By Lt. Gen.
Tom Hobbins
12th Air Force
commander

Ladies and gentlemen of 12th Air Force, our Commander-In-Chief has told the nation we are at war.

Ongoing actions in support of Operation Enduring Freedom, and other operations throughout the world, have cost the lives of Air Force personnel and those of our sister services.

There is no doubt that we're facing multiple challenges throughout our carefully-orchestrated operations worldwide. High Ops Tempo, fatigue and reduced ability to effectively train both at home and abroad slowly erode our safety net.

This is a long-term conflict and we need every member of the 12th Air Force ready to go and to do so safely. I can assure you our leadership is aware of the pace you are working, but we have our orders.

Though we are at war, we must continue to do everything possible to prevent needless losses. Risk versus reward is a consideration you must take whenever you are planning, performing or recovering from any operation.

Losing an Air Force member in a mishap is a tragedy for us all and it exacts a very high price on mission accomplishment. Remember the training you have received – we train like we fight, so let's fight like we've trained.

There is a known tendency for our troops to pursue getting the mission done at any cost because they're hard chargers eager to meet our "real world" taskings.

In their haste to do well, our tried and true methods of doing business are sometimes short changed, or even worse – ignored completely.

The technical orders, checklists, techniques and procedures that served us well in peacetime will continue to do so in wartime.

Reject the mentality that safety is no longer important. Now more than ever, risk management must be at the heart of decision-making at all levels, from the individual to supervisors and commanders.

Without doubt, innovation is a necessary part of deployed operations, but doing so without evaluating our risks and implementing appropriate control measures is foolhardy. We must use well-practiced and established procedures wherever we can. When the situation requires a deviation from the standard practice, the decision to do so must be made at the appropriate level.

Commanders must know what their people are doing and our people must know the commander's intent.

Commanders and supervisors must make decisions based on careful analysis of the risks weighed against the mission requirements. Our people must protect themselves by relying on their training and maintaining their discipline to following established procedures.

No situation jumps to mind where the lives of our people should be at risk in a combat support operation short of an attack on that operation.

Inattention to detail, being in a hurry, an "at war" mentality and fatigue are all issues we must control. We have a mission to do. We need all our resources to accomplish it, especially our most valuable resource – our people.

Alice Coachman: A Model for Excellence

By Rebecca R. Shelton
Saint Innocent Academy,
Eighth-grade class

Alice Coachman, a true model of athletic excellence, was born November 9, 1923, to Fred and Evelyn Coachman. As a young child, Alice began to show great abilities in running and jumping. However, because black children were not permitted to take part in public athletic events, she was denied the opportunity to train and compete with her white peers. Undaunted by this injustice, Coachman continued to practice alone at the neighborhood playground. In 1939, she was awarded a scholarship to Tuskegee Preparatory School. While there, she competed twice in the National 4x100 Meter Relay Championship. She also shattered the school's high jump record, despite jumping barefooted. By age twenty, Alice Coachman had become an extraordinary example of physical expertise in both running and jumping.

Coachman's athletic and academic skills continued to grow as she entered her adult years. In 1946, she received a trade degree from Tuskegee Institute. She then went on to Albany State College in Georgia. Although the Second World War interrupted all international and many domestic athletic competitions, during the war years Coachman garnered 25 national titles in both track and field. She retained the national high jump championship title for ten years from 1939 to 1948. Her fame as a model athlete grew greatly through her war time achievements.

Now in peak physical condition, Alice Coachman began to reach for an athlete's highest achievement—an Olympic gold medal. Though World War II had nixed both the 1940 and 1944 Olympic Games, Coachman continued to train ever harder to finally qualify for the US Olympic Team to the 1948 Games. However, before the Games commenced in London, England, Coachman began to suffer back pain. Heedless of the pain, Coachman jumped 5 feet, 6 and 7 inches on her first try, thus setting an Olympic record which remained unbroken for eight years. She received the gold medal for her jump, making her the first African American woman to receive this honor and the only American woman to win a gold medal at the 1948 Olympic Games.

After the win at the Olympics, Alice Coachman returned to the United States to be given royal treatment, especially in her home state of Georgia. Despite the glory, she decided to retire from competitive sports. She went back to school and received a Home Economics degree. She then began teaching high school physical education Albany, Georgia. She later taught in two colleges. She also founded the Alice Coachman Track and Field Foundation, an organization devoted to helping both young athletes and retired Olympians. Admitted in 1975 to the National Track and Field

Hall of Fame, Coachman has also been inducted into the Black Athletes Hall of Fame, the Bob Douglas Hall of Fame, Helm's Hall of Fame, the Georgia State Hall of Fame, and the Tuskegee Hall of Fame. Alice Coachman's model of courage and determination proved that excellence is not in race, opportunity, or even talent. Excellence is in attitude.

Girls and Boys Town

Common Sense Parenting®

New Book Brings Help and Confidence to Parents of Toddlers

HELP • HEALING • HOPE

Confidence. Less conflict. Enjoyment.

That's what author Bridget Barnes believes parents who use the techniques and skills explained in the new book, Common Sense Parenting of Toddlers and Preschoolers, can gain. Those skills have been taught to parents of 2 to 5 year-olds in workshops offered by Girls and Boys Town since 1996 and are now available to any parent through the book just published by Boys Town Press.

When a parent realizes that "I can correct my child, he or she may get upset with me, but the child is still going to love me," the parent gains confidence, according to Barnes. The book shows parents how to stay calm, communicate clearly, set boundaries, have reasonable expectations, give consistent consequences, and teach a young child self-control and other skills.

Parenting toddlers can be a time of high conflict. Many couples are just finding out that they have very different parenting styles — one may see the other as either too lenient or too strict, says Barnes. It may not be an exaggeration, she adds, to say that agreeing to use Common Sense Parenting® techniques "saves marriages. It can lead to a lot less strife."

Parents, according to Barnes, list many of the same problems with their toddlers — acting up at bedtime and meals, throwing temper tantrums, refusing to take "no" for an answer, etc. In dealing with these issues, however, parents also make common mistakes — treating children like "little adults," giving kids choices they're not equipped to make, and setting expectations too high.

Young children, she says, need lots of reminders, assistance, modeling, and patience. The book provides step-by-step information on how to do these things. Also included are answers to dozens of questions frequently asked by parents of toddlers.

Barnes is the mother of two and stepmother of four children and has been a Common Sense Parenting trainer for 13 years.

Intramural schedule changes to coincide with opening of D-M's new fitness center

By Master Sgt. Dan Carpenter
355th Wing Public Affairs

Times they are a-changin' and the intramural sports schedule is no exception.

According to officials from the Haeffner Fitness and Sports Center, the intramural softball and volleyball seasons have been swapped in anticipation of the opening of the new fitness center in mid-June.

"The decision to switch the seasons around was based on two things," said Bob Gibson, Fitness Center director. "The present fitness center gymnasium is not air conditioned ... the new one is; and we were constantly fighting the monsoon season with our softball schedule."

Intramural pre-season softball begins Monday. The season will continue through May and part of June with playoffs in early June. The intramural volleyball season starts when the new fitness center opens, and will be played in air-conditioned comfort through the summer months.

"We feel this schedule change will be beneficial to everyone," said Gibson, "and we're excited to open the new fitness center."

Gibson pointed out the new fitness center, a 60,000-square-foot, $8 million-plus facility will have the latest and greatest for Team D-M's fitness and sports enthusiasts.

The facility will have larger weight rooms, featuring free weights, Body Master and Hammer Strength stations, and a larger Cardio Theater, featuring nearly 50 pieces of cardio equipment.

An indoor swimming pool and indoor, six-lane, 25-meter running track are also features of the new center. And for the aerobics fanatics at D-M, a new, suspended wooden floor will cushion their aerobic activity. They'll also be able to work out on new steps and workout mats, and be treated to a new state-of-the-art sound system.

"We'll also have a juice bar at the new fitness center," added Gibson. "They'll be selling all sorts of fresh juices, water and energy drinks, and will carry a small supply of supplements ... which will, of course, conform to Air Force policy."

Another highlight of the new center features a child play room complete with equipment so parents can workout and watch their children at the same time.

Aerospace & Arizona Days 2002

Davis-Monthan AFB • April 27 - 28, 2002

“Service For Freedom”

D-M officials expect thousands of eyes to look to the Tucson skies April 27-28 for Aerospace & Arizona Days 2002.

The two-day airshow will feature numerous military and civilian aerial demonstrations and one of the largest displays of static aircraft from across the United States. This year's feature demonstration will be a Combat Search and Rescue pickup accomplished by our very own A/OA-10 aircraft and the 305th Rescue Squadron rescue helicopters. Several demonstration aircraft from the Air Force, Navy, Army, and Marines are expected.

Air Show Program

As a business owner, you can show your support and reach out to a very large captive audience by placing your ad in the air show program.

This special edition will be inserted into the Desert Airman, official base newspaper for Davis-Monthan AFB. It will also be available in high traffic locations in Tucson prior to the show, and made available to the public attending the two-day event.
